

New Batman Villains

Villain	Played By:	Description
Chef Du Jour	Julia Child	A once great French chef tries to cook up trouble for Gotham City. After having her TV show cancelled by GPTV (low ratings and a culinary disaster that had the switchboard lighting up to a point of literal meltdown), she turns to crime. Her first big caper will be to steal a collection of Rare Etruscan Royal Recipes from the special exhibit at the Gotham City Culinary Institute. From there, she wants control of ALL French restaurants in Gotham City.
Chrome Dome	Telly Savalas	Ever since losing his hair in a previous encounter with Batman (Batman accidentally spilled Instant Permanent Hair Remover on him in a Batfight), he is out to destroy Batman, and steal priceless hairpieces. Also conspires to make everyone in Gotham City bald by tampering with the water supply.
Dr. Neurotic	Woody Allen	Flunked out of the Bovine Psychiatry program at Gotham City U. @ New Guernsey. Determined to get revenge by kidnapping prominent psychiatrists and forcing them to cure his many neuroses (which include fear of crooked toothed salamanders, marching bands with cello players, the constant expansion of the universe and Methyl Ermine records) and pulling outrageous stunts, like trying to turn the Statue of Liberation into a huge pile of rust. When trying to do in B&R, he says "Nothing personal, it's just that you have this nasty habit of interfering with my plans" Also armed with a Neuropsychotronic Mind Control Device.
Ilanda the Grate	Carol Channing or Ethel Merman	Lady criminal with an obnoxious grating voice, former Broadstreet singer/actress who wanted a bit more excitement in life after her last few shows bombed. Evil plots include kidnapping a theatre critic from the Gotham Times and demanding $20 million, plus writing only favorable reviews of her performances (which are dismal), plotting to blow up the newspaper building if her demands are not met, and stealing the wardrobe of Penn Veneer, world renowned Broadstreet entertainer.

Mr. Nice Guy	Bill Cosby	Plans to put the population of Gotham City under his power by putting Nice Pills in the water supply, and have them unwittingly commit robberies for him. Fools some people with his highly likeable personality., except for Batman and Robin.
Mr. Personality	Howard Cosell	After losing his marbles while doing a telecast for the most boring croquet match in history, Mr. Personality (AKA Harvey Osterberger, who used to sell air-raid-sirens before becoming a sportscaster) decides to put some excitement back into the world of televised sports. He starts by sounding a portable air-raid siren during the Wayne Foundation Charity Golf Match, creating a distraction while his gang robs the proceeds from the club treasury. In the resulting pandemonium, he comes out and tries to interview people in the crowd. When he later tries to finish off the Dynamic Duo, he interviews them just before he leaves them to their fate. Known particularly for his obnoxious long-winded commentary.
The Brat	John McEnroe	Former tennis champ and sore loser whose bad childish temper got him thrown out of leagues everywhere. Now out for revenge. Known to use trick tennis balls.
The Crooner	Bing Crosby	Commits robberies by spraying Enchantment Gas on everyone, and crooning, while his henchmen pick the place clean
The Diva	Mariah Carey, Whitney Houston, or Dionne Warwick	Singing sensation for whom fame was not enough. She wants to wipe out her competition and dominate the world of divas by devious means like using voice alterers on her rival divas, stealing their wardrobes and holding them for ransom, swiping and altering the master tapes for their albums and various smear campaigns. Once even tried to "rain out" a Cirene Dijon outdoor concert by cloud seeding.
The Fiddler	Jean Luc Ponty	Megalomaniac concert violinist gone bad! Uses a dastardly Fiddle of Doom. His plan, steal a priceless collection of 1/2 sized violins and for their safe return, demands $100 million, the conductorship of the Gotham City Philharmonic for life, and that it will only perform his music (which the critics roundly panned).

The Lawyer (AKA Darrence Clarrow)	Johnny Cochran	Tries to ruin Batman and Robin by suing them for violating the right of criminals to commit crimes, and also tries to legally force them to unmask themselves.
The Lounge Lizard	Engelbert Humperdinck	A lounge singer who wants a bit more than just fame or fortune. He wants control of all cabaret lounges in Gotham, and wants to take over the city of Lost Vagrant Tries to get rid of B&R by sending them freefalling in a sabotaged elevator 102 stories in the Empirical State Building, with "The Girl From Impanema" playing full blast!
The Narrator	Jackson Beck	Narrator who was always turned down for on-screen parts turns to crime. Hides near the scene of a crime and narrates over a small but powerful PA system/Voice Projector as his henchmen do his bidding. Talks like a narrator all the time.
The Polkameister	Lawrence Welk	Washed up Polka musician bent on revenge because Rock & Roll pushed him out of the market and the public eye. Armed with an evil Trick Accordion, and his gang, The Band of Merry Cranksters, he tries to sabotage major rock concerts and rob the box office, among other devious deeds.
